

Tanzania's newest wildlife experience is located high above the savannah where agama lizards and the red flowers of aloe vera provide a vivid and eye-catching contrast to herbs, grasses and bare rocks.

Location

Literally perched on the edge of Tarangire National Park, among trees and rock outcrops, the lodge is nestled into the cliffs and huge granite slabs. Built of natural materials, predominantly local stone, wood and burnt brick, Boundary Hill Lodge offers outstanding views over the Silale and Gosuwa swamps, where elephant and buffalo graze among the acacia and baobab trees beneath the vastness of Africa's sky.

Community Conservation

- Boundary Hill Lodge is the forerunner of other similar projects in Tanzania and has a number of pioneering features.
- The first lodge in Tanzania to have a local community shareholding, with the Masai village of Lolkisale owning 50%.
- One of the few lodges in Tanzania to be located in its own exclusive Conservation Area, Lolkisale Village has set aside 164 square kilometres for walking safaris, night drives and fly camping.
- The first lodge in Tanzania to put the needs of the surrounding environment uppermost.

The Lodge

Consisting of only eight very spacious individually designed rooms, the lodge is designed to offer as much privacy as possible. None of the rooms are overlooked. All of them have private sitting areas, spacious balconies and spectacular views. Built in harmony with the environment, among the rocks and cliffs, of natural materials and colours, with fine furnishings, the rooms offer unparalleled comfort and quietly understated luxury. All have en-suite facilities with separate showers and three are double suites with cast-iron baths. We also have a family suite: two bedrooms, two bathrooms, a sitting/entrance area and a spacious verandah with a fireplace to enjoy the evenings.

Boundary Hill Lodge provides a unique African experience and an opportunity to savour the savannah in a very special way.

Green Efforts:

In this unique area, which is environmentally sensitive, every step has been taken to ensure minimal impact. All roofs are designed to collect rainwater. This is stored in concealed cisterns. We don't expect it to take any water from the surrounding habitat. Solar panels and wind turbines provide all power. There is no noisy petrol or diesel generator to detract from or mask the sounds of the African bush.

Dining

The dining and bar areas have been built to make maximum use of existing features and to capitalise on the surrounding views. Natural terraces have been subtly enhanced to provide intimate areas in which to relax and savour the sights and sounds of the savannah below. The smell of freshly baked breads emanating from the outdoor oven, together with fish, meat and vegetables sizzling on the barbecue tempt the senses and provide a gentle contrast and climax to the days activities. Fine food in stunning surroundings.

Boundary Hill Lodge offers much more than just a place to spend the night after a day game viewing in Tarangire National Park. In addition to the comforts on-site the lodge is located on the main migration route for a large proportion of the Tarangire wildlife. From November to March the surrounding area is teeming with zebra, wildebeest, buffalo, elephant and other game as they leave the park after the first rains to graze around the Gosuwa Swamp and Lemiyon Plains.

“Moses, Loy and Emmanuel did an excellent job on the walking safaris. The first safari we looked at prints and dung (I quite enjoyed this chance to learn a bit more about the animals). The second safari we saw an elephant encounter with baboons! The elephant was doing some charging and trumpeting at them. The third walking safari (yesterday) we saw an elephant herd with a lioness trying to stalk one of the baby elephants!!! It was very dramatic. The room was awesome. It's such a lovely place to stay with friendly and professional staff. Doug and I are already thinking about coming back.” Francoise Lafferty-Hancock, 30th August 2010.
